

September 2009

One Week to Go

Jason Seibel
American Public University System

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.apus.edu/theapuseagle>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Seibel, Jason (2009) "One Week to Go," The APUS Eagle: Vol. 2: Iss. 1, Article 2.
Available at: <http://digitalcommons.apus.edu/theapuseagle/vol2/iss1/2>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the ePress Journals at DigitalCommons@APUS. It has been accepted for inclusion in The APUS Eagle by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@APUS. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@apus.edu.

“One Week to Go”
By Jason Seibel

One week to go in this hell hole
One week to go in this God forsaken land
I can hear the sound of my children's voices
I can hear the sound of birds in the trees
I can smell the perfume on my wife
I can smell the meat cooking on the grill
I can feel the softness of my bed
I can feel the touch of her hand
I can taste the beer on my lips
I can taste her lips on mine
I can see my love at the airport
I can see the country that I love

One week to go in this hell hole
One week to go in the God forsaken land
I can hear the sound of the whistle overhead
I can hear the BOOM as it detonates
I can smell the death in the air
I can smell the burning gas
I can feel the concussion as the air moves past me
I can feel the push of everyone around me
I can taste the dust kicked up
I can taste the blood in my mouth
I can see the flower of explosion
I can see the mayhem around me

One to go in this hell hole
One week to go in this God forsaken land

Please...

About Jason Seibel:

I am a Tech Sergeant in USAF working in Security Forces at Fairchild AFB, WA. I am 32 years old. I am married and have three children. I have been writing stories pretty much since I could write. My primary interest in writing is screenplays and I would like to tackle a novel with the hope of becoming published. I have written and directed a short film titled "Foul Play" and am currently working on a comedy screenplay I hope to produce next year.

